"O you Americans," say the French, "are so rich; you have no economy because you have no need of it. You write your letters on thick paper, put them in envelops, and seal them wish sealing wax. We can not afford to pay for any surplus weight;" letters are all weighed as they pass through the mail, and baggage as it goes into the cars. "You Americans," said our commissarie, "are the propie; you pay well, and you pay cheerfully."
